What it Costs to Bombard a City.

That war is an expensive occupation, the British government and People are beginning to understand by means of augmented taxes, and the opening of the fire of the Allies augments a calculation as to the cost of the iron balls which have been thrown into Sebastopol by the fire houled cannon which have vemited them in what Gortschakoff called "the inferroal fire."

The accounts by the Aug. represent that each of these suns fired one hundred and I wenty regards. hese guns fired one hundred and I wenty rounds day, which gives a total for the five hundred o sixty thousand rounds. This fire has been con-tidued thirteen days, making an agregate of seven bundred and eighty thousand missiles rained upon the sity.

The weight of the shot fired from the guns of the Allies verious probably from nineteen to one hundred and forty ponods—and of the shells from fitteen to one hundred and to oue hundred and ten pounds—and forty-five pounds would be probably a low estimate for an average. This would give a daily delivering of iron to the Russians, amounting to two million seven hundred thousand pounds, and two million seven hundred thousand pounds and a total for the thirteen days, of thirty five million one hundred thousand pounds—the prime cast of which in the rough, at the average price of pig iron to Eogland for the last year, was not less than three hundred and thirteen thousand three

AVALANCHE IN THE PYRENESS-Sixty Persons ATALANCER IN THE PTENNESS—Sixty Persons.

Attitud.—The inhebitants of Oxtrigm. to the Pyrences, on the Spanish akle of the frontier, seeing some weeks ago that an avalanche of snow was about to fall, assembled in houses which they thought the least exposed to danger. Unfortunately the snow came down on those very houses, leaving almost funtouched several others which had been abandoned. By the fall fourteen houses and fortier four harps were computed whethered. and forty-four barns were completely destroyed Seventy-two persons were buried in the ruins and sixty of them were killed on the epot. The remaining twelve, though got out sire, were ac-dreadfully injured that some of them died soon after, and others were considered in desperate state. The loss of cattle was very considerable
